Feel the beat / Feel the heat

Author's Notes:
Listening to Icky Thumb got me thinking as how it could have been between them when they were rehearsing at home...

Jack doesn't remember why he started playing. He thinks it was because of these sensations that were trapped inside of him and which he needed to get out of his system.

It looks to be the same for her. Drumming is a relief, an escape, but he sure as hell never looked as good as she does when she hits the drums.

He sits behind Meg as she starts playing, his head against the back of her neck, sliding his hands over her forearms as they steadily move up and down. Eyes closed, he slowly begins to feel the heat.
